SCOTISH SONGS.

WITH SYMPHONIES AND ACCOMPANIMENTS.

BY
PLEYEL & KOZELUCH;
THE POETRY BY BURNS, &c.
Just Published, the Second Book,

SPEEDILY will be Published, the THIRD and FOURTH Books of the above Work—the leading object of which has been, to collect the best and most authentic sets of ALL the admired Scottish Airs, with a view to form a pure and standard repository of these, and thus to fix and preserve them from the alterations of chance, ignorance, or caprice.

The next object was to procure, not only the most suitable Accompaniments, but the addition of delightful Symphonies to introduce and conclude each Air, for the Piano Forte and Violin. The Editor has the satisfaction of presenting these, (with second-voice parts also to many of the airs,) from the celebrated PLEYEL and KOZELUCH, who have done the whole with such singular felicity, as must render the Songs in the highest degree interesting to Piano Forte players, as well as to every person of taste.

The Poetry will be found every way worthy of the music. While the good old songs are retained, those of an inspired and exceptional kind are excluded, and in their room are the favourite Songs of Burns as here presented. Among these are upwards of FIFTY ENTIRELY NEW, which exhibit all the charms of his genius in the richest variety, both of serious and humorous composition; and which, having been written solely for this work, cannot elsewhere be set to music, as will appear from what follows, viz.

"I do hereby certify that all the songs of my writing, published and to be published by Mr George Thomson of Edinburgh, are so published by my authority. And moreover that I never empowered any other person to publish any of the songs written by me for his work. And I authorize him to prosecute any person or persons, pirating or publishing any of those songs without his consent. In testimony whereof, &c." ROBERT BURNS.

To render the Work complete and alike interesting in England as in Scotland, a set of Songs, purely English, and perfectly suited to the Scottish Airs, are given in addition to the songs in the Scottish dialect. These are partly selected, and partly new by PETER PINDAR, &c.

The First and Second Books, together 12s. may be had of George Thomson, No. 16, High Terrace, Edinburgh, by whom only subscriptions for the third and fourth books are received. Subscribers for the former, who shall subscribe to him for the latter, (price also 12s.) will be presented with two Engravings to embellish the volumes, executed by Paton Thomson, London, in a style of excellence, not inferior to the other parts of the work. And the Editor flatters himself it will be found on examination that a work more perfect in all its parts, has never been offered to the public. The price to Non-subscribers will be raised.

Pleyel's Six Genuine SONATAS, with Scottish Airs, for the Piano Forte, may be had as above. All other Sonatas of this kind, published in Pleyel's name, are spurious.

NEW WAY TO GROW RICH.

TO PURCHASE ESTATES AT CHEAP PRICES.
 AN advertisement, entitled "MATRIMONY," having been twice inserted in a very prominent situation in the Glasgow Courier; as this is levelled at an individual, it is a duty he owes himself to inform the Public, this advertisement has proceeded entirely from private animosity. This advertisement was artfully published the very day he was in Glasgow, with the view to induce the world to consider him the author; and, previous to its insertion, he received, by post, a letter, containing the same sentiments and expressions. For the most unfair purposes, some person was employed to peruse a Young Lady, related to many of the principal families in this country; and, under this cloak, to address proposals of marriage to a Gentleman. Probably with a view to give the more complete effect, an advertisement was at the same time inserted in the Edinburgh Evening Courant, that a Young Lady had left her friends, on some trivial occasion, and, in order to prevent the possibility of the present advertiser detecting the fraud, the most sacred promise of secrecy was required in the letter. But this was the same fate as many other attempts to effect the complete ruin of the same individual, the letter being entirely disregarded. The cause of so much cruelty is briefly this:—A much injured individual positively refused to sell his Estate at a very great undervalue; he has, therefore, been persecuted for a number of years past with a savage ferocity, and by a rapid succession of an immense multitude of cruel outrages, such as are altogether unparalleled in any other part of Britain, and probably without example in any part of the civilized world. Without having ever injured a human being, he has suffered this savage persecution, from the excessive degree of envy and private animosity born to him, as proprietor of an extensive barony, on the banks of a large river, in a situation of singular natural magnificence; from this purchaser's perfect knowledge of the near prospect of its incalculable improvement, owing to its being situated in the heart of one of the richest coal and lime countries in Europe, and in the centre of all the great towns in Scotland; the near expiry of every tack on the estate except one small possession; the well-known richness of the Mines and Minerals within the estate, joined to the privilege of a Mill-dam for Machinery upon one of the falls of this great river, and the general expectation of a Canal for Coal; and, from a vain expectation that he would thereby be forced to sell his estate at a price ridiculously low. And, even if the price asked for this estate had really been extravagant, (as the account, anxiously circulated by a disappointed purchaser, represents,) it is a very proper subject of enquiry, whether this entitled any disappointed purchaser to make it his incessant study, by every means which cunning and artifice could invent, to harass and distress the unfortunate proprietor.

It is a piece of justice which the advertiser owes himself, also to state, that it has been given out with surprising industry, and from precisely the same cause, that he had immense sums of hoarded money, by artfully representing him as possessed of three different estates, although he is not entitled to draw a shilling from one of these. It would be kind in the persons employed to circulate this report, to point out where this hoarded money is to be found. For it is a fact, admitting of the clearest proof, that the Advertiser has always had debts to a great amount, since this Estate, now the bone of contest, was purchased during his minority by his Trustees, between fourteen and fifteen years ago; and, having since expended great sums in the improvement of two different properties, besides another large disbursement, at a time when money is difficult to borrow; from these causes it has always been his misfortune, with a large property, to have a very limited income. The Advertiser has no concealments to make, and will most cheerfully, therefore, give a full and ample narrative of the whole of this extraordinary business.

TRAVELLERS ACCOMMODATED WITH SAFETY, EASE, AND EXPEDITION.

ROYAL TELEGRAPH LIGHT POST COACH, with Four Horses, Lamps, and Guard the whole way.
WILLIAM LOFTUS & CO. Proprietors of the Royal Telegraph beg leave, in the most humble manner, to return their thanks to the Public for the very liberal encouragement they have experienced since the above Coach commenced running between Edinburgh and London, and beg leave to inform them, that by the advice of their friends, they have extended the concern to GLASGOW.

As the Proprietors of the Royal Telegraph have (for the sake of public advantage) been the first to introduce a four horse Coach upon the Glasgow road, which for care and expedition, they hope to give universal satisfaction, they therefore beg leave to solicit the countenance of a generous Public, in case any attempt is made to oppose them, being satisfied that, unless they had stepped forward, the Public would still have been deprived of a conveyance of this nature.

The above Coach commenced running to Glasgow this day, and will continue to set off every morning at seven o'clock, from Mr Wordsworth's Caledonian Tavern and Coffeehouse, Leith Terrace, and arrives at Mr Gardner's, Buck's Head, Glasgow, in six hours, from whence it sets out at four afternoon, and returns to Mr Wordsworth's, Edinburgh, at ten o'clock same night, where the best beds and accommodation may be depended on.

THE ROYAL TELEGRAPH

LONDON GAZETTE.

WHITEHALL—January 22, 1799.
 Letters, of which the following are copies, were yesterday received from the Earl of Balcarras, by his Grace the Duke of Portland, one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

My Lord, Jamaica, November 7, 1798.
 On the 31st of October I received a dispatch from the Bay of Honduras.

Lieutenant-Colonel Barrow informs me, that the settlers had been attacked by a flotilla consisting of thirty-one vessels, having on board two thousand land troops and five hundred seamen. Arthur O'Neil, Governor General of Yucatan, and a Field Marshal in the service of Spain, commanded in person. I have great satisfaction in transmitting the letter of the Lieutenant Colonel, by which your Grace will be informed, that this arrangement has been repulsed, and the expedition entirely frustrated.

The Lieutenant Colonel speaks in the handsomest manner of the conduct of Captain Moss, of his Majesty's ship Merlin, and of the wonderful exertions of the settlers and their negro slaves, who manned the gun boats.

The conduct of Lieutenant Colonel Barrow, and of the settlers, in putting the port of Honduras Bay into a respectable state of defence, as well as the gallant manner in which it was maintained, gives me entire satisfaction, and it is with pleasure that I report their services to your Grace.

I have the honour to be, &c. BALCARRAS.
 To his Grace the Duke of Portland.

[The letter of Lieutenant Colonel Barrow, and that of Captain Moss of his Majesty's ship Merlin are very long, which prevents us from inserting them to-day.]

 The King has been pleased to appoint Lieutenant General Cornelius Cayler to be General and Commander in Chief of this Majesty's forces employed or to be employed in the kingdom of Portugal.

HOUSE OF LORDS—JAN. 21.
 There was a very full attendance of Peers; among others their Royal Highnesses the Dukes of Gloucester, York, and Clarence, and many Peers who have not before appeared in the House this Session. Prince Ernest also was present.—The Duke of Rutland was introduced.

LORD GRENVILLE said, he had a message from his Majesty, to deliver. It was read by the Lord Chancellor, (it was the same in substance as the message delivered in the House of Commons.) After which LORD GRENVILLE said, he would move to have the same taken into consideration to-morrow, and that their Lordships be summoned upon the occasion. He thought it proper to mention then to the House, that it was not his intention to-morrow to offer any motion on the subject of the message, except that of moving an address of thanks to his Majesty for the communication; that that address should contain generally an assurance that the House would be ready to concur in any measure which might tend to consolidate the strength, power, and resources of the United Empire; but that it should not be worded in any manner by which the House might be understood to pledge itself to adopt any specific plan.

The address was then ordered to be taken into consideration to-morrow, and their Lordships to be summoned.—Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—JAN. 22.

UNION WITH IRELAND.

Mr Secretary DUNDAS brought up a message from his Majesty.

"GEORGE REX,
 "His Majesty is persuaded, that the unremitting industry with which our enemies persevere in their avowed design of effecting the separation of Ireland from this kingdom cannot fail to engage the particular attention of Parliament, and his Majesty recommends it to the House to consider of the most effectual means of counteracting and finally defeating this design, and he trusts that a review of all the circumstances which have recently occurred (joined to the sentiment of mutual affection and common interest), will dispose the Parliaments of both kingdoms to provide in the manner which they shall judge most expedient for settling such a complete and final adjustment as may best tend to improve and perpetuate a connection essential for their common security, and to augment and consolidate the strength, power, and resources of the British Empire."

"G. R.
 On the motion of Mr Dundas, "that this message be taken into consideration to-morrow."

Mr SHERIDAN said, he took it for granted, that when this message was made the subject of a motion to be taken into consideration, it would be proposed to follow an address to his Majesty, with an assurance on the part of that House, that they would proceed to the consideration of the subject—he therefore thought it but fair to give notice, that in the view he had of this most important subject, the bringing forward, at this time, of any question whatever upon it, either here or in Ireland, was to full of danger, to replete with mischief, that he should endeavour to arrest the progress of the measure at once. He was convinced it was the common feeling and wish of that House, and he hoped of this country, that such measures may be pursued as may lead to restore cordial harmony between the two countries; but to discuss any points of Union now might be fatal to the prosperity, perhaps the existence, of both. He objected to the time in which this momentous business was proposed to be discussed. He should be ready to join in thanks to his Majesty for his gracious communication; but instead of assuring his Majesty that they would discuss the subject, or take it into consideration, he should endeavour to persuade the House to express its regret, that his Majesty's Counsellors should have advised him to take up this measure at this moment.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER observed that the Honourable Gentleman had given notice of his intention to pursue a line of conduct which no man could have anticipated. What was the tendency? Why, that the House would be acting unwisely to move an address to his Majesty, giving their assurance that they should proceed without unnecessary delay to the consideration of the message which he had been graciously pleased to communicate. Was this perfectly respectful? Was it the manner in which that House ought to proceed consistent with its solicitude for the welfare and happiness of the country, for the independence and safety of Ireland? The address which the House would be required to vote, would merely contain those sentiments which even the Hon. Gentleman himself, and certainly every man in that House who wished well to the common interests of the two countries, would be ready to concur in.

With what kind of arguments the Hon. Gentleman meant to oppose such an Address, it was not possible for him himself to apprehend. He would, therefore, content himself with briefly stating, that it was his intention to move an Address to his Majesty to-morrow, and would then propose a day of sufficient interval for the reconsideration of the subject. This day would be Thursday next. It was not his intention, however, to ask any vote until the general outlines should be agreed upon. On that day he should bring forward certain resolutions, which would form the outline of the plan, which he should move to be printed; and after this he should propose the consideration of the measure in its detail, on such a day as would allow a sufficient interval to consider of the measure with that deliberate calmness and attention which were due to its transcendent importance.

Mr SHERIDAN said, the Right Hon. Gentleman took up this subject as if something disrespectful had been urged by him towards the communication from the throne; nothing was more distant from his intention—at the same time the Right Hon. Gentleman must give him leave to remind the House, that while he was talking of "the anxious solicitude and parental goodness of the Throne towards the welfare of the British empire," every Member of Parliament had a right to consider the Message from his Majesty as the Message from his Ministers; nor was it necessary for him to wait any time to see whether he should assent to any proposition upon this measure, because he deprecated, at this hour, any discussion at all upon the subject. With regard to the argument with which he would endeavour to prevail upon the House to be of his opinion, he hoped the Right Hon. Gentleman would wait until he heard them before he judged of their force.

The question was then put for taking the Message into consideration to-morrow, and carried.

London

JANUARY 23.

Yesterday morning his Majesty took an excursion to Kew on horseback. Previously to which his Majesty narrowly escaped being thrown from his horse, as he was coming out from the entrance of the Queen's house, occasioned by two of the sentinels resting their arms just as his Majesty approached them, which caused his horse to start back about six yards, and fall upon his belly; upon which General Manners was dispatched to the officer on duty at the Queen's Guard, to give orders to the sentinels to rest their arms; a considerable time before his Majesty approaches them in future. Princes Edward and Ernest accompanied his Majesty, whose horses were likewise nearly throwing them.

Mr Jackson, his Majesty's Charge d'Affaires at Turin, in the absence of Mr Trevor, is arrived in London. General Joubert started no difficulty to the granting of passports to the Ministers of the powers at war with France, who resided at Turin. The principal Ministers in that city were those of Great Britain, Russia, and Portugal.

The following are the number and rank of the officers, and route of the march of the Russian troops, as given in the Haerlem Courant of the 22d of December: Two lieutenant-generals, six major-generals, twelve colonels, twenty-one lieutenant-colonels, forty-three majors, eighty-five captains. The first column of these troops is to be at Cranzitz, in Moravia, from the 9th to the 12th of December; Raunitz, 11th and 13th; Brunn, 13th and 14th; Canitz, 14th and 16th; Miflitz, 16th and 17th; Grain, 17th and 19th; Rotz, 19th and 21st; Sitzendorf, 21st and 24th; Crens on the Danube, 24th and 25th.

The second column is to be at Olmutz, 14th and 15th; Karlitz, 15th and 16th; Raunitz, 17th and 18th; Brunn, 19th and 20th; Canitz, 21st; Miflitz, 22d and 23d; Grain, 24th; Rotz, 25th and 26th; Sitzendorf, 27th; Habendorf, 28th; and at Crens on the 30th.

According to accounts from Radom, in East Galicia, a second division of Russian troops, consisting of 25,000 men, had arrived in that vicinity.

The famous Vander Noot has been arrested in Holland, and is now confined in the citadel of Antwerp.

The Emperor, at the moment that the war broke out, had, in Italy or upon the frontiers, 80,000 men—the King of Naples, 60,000—and the French from the Var to the extremity of the Roman State, 90,000, of which 70,000 were French, and 20,000 auxiliaries, Italians and Polonese.

COUGHS AND COLDS

Are too commonly the neglected Parent of Incurable Asthmata, Consumptions, &c. &c.

WALSH'S ELEGANT and much Esteemed LOZENGES of COLTSFOOT are unquestionably the most prompt, agreeable, and effectual Medicine for preventing, alleviating, and removing recent Coughs and Complaints of the Lungs, for relief and cure of Humoral Asthmata, Spitting of Blood, approaching Consumptions, and Sore Throats, a well-known remedy, administered and recommended by some of the first people in this kingdom.

Case recommended by the late Earl of Glencairn.

Extract of a Letter from J. TYSO, Esq. St Kitt's, May 29, 1798. Mr WALSH—Sir, I have found your Antipertussis of so much service on my plantations, that I shall never despair of curing Cough, or any Complaint of the Lungs. It was strongly recommended to me by the late Earl of Glencairn (when I was in England) for an obstinate Asthmatic Cough, which it effectually cured. I will take care never to be without so valuable a Medicine; and will strongly advise its use on every plantation. I am, Sir, your humble Servant, J. TYSO.

EDINBURGH—JANUARY 26.

[FROM OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT.]

HOUSE OF COMMONS—Jan. 23.

Mr DUNDAS appeared at the bar with certain papers relating to the conspiracies of certain societies, carried on for the purpose of producing a separation between Great Britain and Ireland. Mr Dundas said, it was his intention not to say one word more than to move the Address, and to move another day for the farther consideration of the Message. He was at a loss to know what could be said against this mode of proceeding, and should make no farther observations until he heard it.

He then moved the Address, which was a reiteration of the Message.

Mr SHERIDAN was not of the same opinion as the Honourable Secretary, that nothing more was necessary than to move the address at present. How did it happen that the last final adjustment and arrangement had failed of its effect. The Right Hon. Gentleman affirmed that this House was in possession of proofs that the final adjustment had not been sufficient. He referred to the declaration of the Irish Parliament, that no power could legislate for that country, but the Lords and Commons of Ireland. This declaration was sanctioned by the British Parliament, and it was too important to be departed from.

It might be thought that there was something improper in his manner of taking up this question. It perhaps may be said that he should at first have voted for the Address, and delay what he had to say until another occasion. This, however, was not a time for attending to forms and ceremonies. He would do his Majesty's Ministers the credit to allow that they thought this was the best means they could take of consolidating the connexion of the two countries; but the agitating this question would have directly the opposite effect. It would diminish the zeal of those who have endeavoured to repress foreign enemies and domestic insurrection. He had thought that the victories of our sea-men and the detection of the correspondence with France had terminated the attempts of the enemy, but this would revive them. He deprecated any attempt to carry an union with Ireland in the present circumstances. It was evident that the people of Ireland were not at present in a situation to express their sentiments on that subject. He would place the whole upon this. It was impossible to see any thing in the measure but what would tend to produce separation instead of making the connexion between the countries stronger.

Was Ireland to be tricked into an Union. A force of negative intimidation was carried on. The consequence of this measure would be, that an union of different would be created in Ireland. At present, the disaffected skulked under various pretences, but here they would be all united under one standard. They would say, we have been tricked out of our independence, and we now stand up to recover it. It was a astonishing that the proposition should be entertained in Ireland. In the proceedings of the Parliament of that country, it was recorded, that the country had risen to the highest pitch of commercial prosperity; and that they had defeated a formidable conspiracy. Was to be told that conspiracies would be better detected, if they were left to a British Parliament. Perhaps he should be told, that there would be a little Parliam. Committee, which would regulate the affairs of Ireland. He proceeded to treat the idea of a Parliament sitting in London to be capable of legislating properly for Ireland as perfectly absurd. He alluded to the difficulties of persons in official situations in Ireland. The conduct of the Government there was directly saying to every person in office, "If you oppose the question of union, you must resign."

He continued to oppose the motion in a long and eloquent speech, and concluded by moving an amendment, the effect of which was, that the House expressed its surprise and deep regret that the final adjustment which took place of the matters in discussion between Great Britain and Ireland in 1782, and which the Parliaments of the two countries thought would have produced the most salutary effects and means of permanent happiness, had failed in its object—and further, to observe, that since the House apprehends, from the terms of his Majesty's Message, that it is in the contemplation of his Majesty's Ministers to propose an union with Ireland, to deprecate such a measure at this moment, and to request that his Majesty will be pleased to remove from his Councils all those persons who have advised him to agitate the discussion of topics so highly delicate at all times, but particularly in the present situation of Ireland.

HOUSE OF LORDS—Jan. 22.

At five o'clock this evening his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant went in the usual state to the House of Peers, and the Commons having attended at the Bar, pronounced the following Speech from the Throne:

"My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I have received his Majesty's commands to meet you in Parliament.

"I congratulate you on the happy effects which have followed the unparalleled achievement of the detachment of his Majesty's fleet under the command of Rear Admiral Lord Nelson, on the total defeat of the French Squadron off the coasts of this kingdom, by that under the command of Sir John Borlase Warren, and on the brilliant and important conquest of Minorca.—Those events, while they afford to us in common with every other description of his Majesty's subjects matter of just pride and satisfaction, must at the same time give confidence to other Powers, and throw to all Europe, the beneficial effect of a system of vigour and exertion, directed with manly perseverance against the destructive projects of the common enemy."

"I feel much concern in being obliged to acquaint you, that a spirit of disaffection still prevails in several parts of this kingdom; and that the secret agents of the enemy are active in raising an expectation of fresh assistance from France."

"In this situation, and under the evident necessity of continuing the war with vigour, his Majesty firmly relies upon that spirit and magnanimity which have been

The vendors of this medicine cannot get supplied so quick as the demand is for it; and it is a fact worthy of remark, that they are sold as soon as they arrive to hand—most of the half-guinea bottles being before they are ordered. Those in the neighbourhood of Edinburgh who were lately disappointed in being obliged to wait for considerable time for the Cordial Balm of Gilead, are respectfully informed, that the fault does not rest with any one of the undermentioned agents. The medicine cannot be prepared so quick as the demand is for it. Dr. SOLOMON (the preparer) had been wrote to repeatedly, to which he answered, that a supply should be forwarded to them as well as all those who applied in regular succession, as soon as it was in his power to prepare it good and genuine; but that no consideration whatever should induce him to hasten the process, or lessen the virtues of the medicine. A fresh and valuable supply is just received, for the accommodation of the afflicted, with nervous, weak and debilitated habits, &c. by Mr. Andrew Smith, Mr. Baxter, and Mr. Kettle—and it is hoped that, by an early application, future disappointments may be prevented.

A NEW VILLAGE AT KINGUSIE, IN BADENOCH.
THE DUKE OF GORDON being desirous to have a VILLAGE erected near to the CHURCH of KINGUSIE, in Badenoch, will give every degree of encouragement to Tradesmen, Manufacturers, and Shopkeepers, who may be inclined to settle there.

There is a stream of water now running close to the spot intended for the village, fitted to serve a Bleachfield, and to turn machinery of every kind.

Speemakers and Weavers are more particularly wanted in that country; and may depend upon finding constant employment. There is an inexhaustible Moss at no great distance.

Fens, or Leas in Perpetuity, will be given to the Tenements at a moderate fee-duty. Each tenement is sufficiently large for a house, office, and garden, and the fens may be accommodated with some acres of good rich land in the neighbourhood at a reasonable rent.

For particulars application may be made at Gordon Castle, by Forchabers; or to the Rev. John Anderson, minister of Kingusie, near Pitmar, who will point out the ground to be leased off, and shew the plan of the village, made out by Mr. Brown, surveyor.

MID-LOTHIAN.
LANDS, MILLS, PRINTING-FIELD, &c.

By Adjournment.
To be Sold by public voluntary roup, on the 13th day of February, within the Royal Exchange Coffeehouse, Edinburgh, at two o'clock afternoon.

ALL and Whole the MANSION-HOUSE OF GORGIE MILL, Office, Garden, Pleasure Ground, and Inclosures, consisting in whole of 22 English acres, or thereby, with the Tindie, Parsonage, and Vicarage of the said Lands; as also, the FLOUR and BARLEY MILLS, and whole Houses upon the premises; all lying in the parish of St. Cuthbert's, and shire of Edinburgh.

The premises are distant from Edinburgh less than two miles on the great road to Glasgow by Calder. The lands are in general of a superior quality, and laid out to great advantage.

The Mills have lately been completely rebuilt in the most spacious substantial manner, and the machinery constructed and executed upon the most improved principles. By judges they are reckoned very superior mills, which, joined to the great command of water, being a fall of above nine feet, give them a great advantage over most of the mills near Edinburgh.

Part of the Lands has been employed as an old established Printfield, for which, from its situation, command of water, and number of suitable houses already built, it is extremely well adapted.

For further particulars application may be made to John More, accountant in Edinburgh, or James Hay, W. S. in whose hands the title-deeds are for the inspection of intending purchasers.

A HOUSE IN GEORGE STREET,

In the front area are three cellars, larger, water-pipe, and cistern; and there is a wine-cellar within the house fitted up with catacombs. The house is newly painted and papered, quite free from smoke or vermin, and has been in possession of the proprietor ever since it was built in 1786.

ALSO TO BE SOLD.
That neat VILLA at TRINITY MAINS, about two miles north from the New Town, containing two acres and nine falls of ground, completely inclosed, with the Dwelling-house and offices.

The garden is remarkably well stocked, and very productive, having a handsome green-house, and brick wall of considerable extent, well clothed with fruit trees of the very best kinds, all in a high bearing condition.

For further particulars application may be made to the proprietor, No. 21, George Street—or to Alex. G. Hunter, W. S. Shakespeare Square.

The house consists of a dining-room, 29 feet by 19, two drawing-rooms, the one 28 feet by 18, and the other 22 feet by 14, seven bed-chambers, besides garrets for servants, a kitchen, scullery, housekeeper's room, servants hall, cellars, &c. and is most substantially and handsomely fitted up.

To be seen Tuesdays and Fridays, from two to four o'clock; and those wishing to purchase may apply to Basil Clapham, Canonsgate, or Mr. Adair, writer to the signet, who has powers to conclude a private bargain.

The parish of Abernethy will have to produce four men, the parish of Mulin four men, the parish of Ochtergaven three men, and the parish of Dowlis one man, to serve as Militiamen, for the said County, being the remainder of the numbers yet wanting to make up the quota of men apportioned on these parishes, and drawn at the first Ballot to serve for them respectively, after making allowance for those already produced by them, and now serving.

The persons whose names are above mentioned having been drawn at the first Ballot (but left undrawn at the second) and the men required from the parishes of Abernethy, Mulin, Ochtergaven, and Dowlis, are desired to appear, and attend the Deputy Lieutenants and Justices of the Peace for the said County, viz. Those in the several parishes composing the district of Weem, upon Wednesday the 13th February next; those in the several parishes composing the districts of Perth and Carse of Gowrie, at Perth, upon Thursday the 14th of February next, and those in the several districts above named, at the usual places of meeting in these districts, respectively, on the said 14th of February next, then and there to take the oath of allegiance to his Majesty, and to be enrolled to serve in the Militia of the County of Perth, as Militiamen during the present war, and for one kallender month after the end thereof, or otherwise to produce Substitutes able and fit for service, to be approved of by the Deputy Lieutenants, and to be qualified and enrolled to serve in their place, and that under the pains and penalties contained in the Acts of Parliament establishing a Militia force in Scotland.

Such Militiamen as may be inclined to join the regiment, or who may provide Substitutes, previous to the day of meeting above appointed, are desired to apply to the nearest Deputy Lieutenant, who will take measures for their being immediately sworn, enrolled, and entered upon pay.
